Stephen's Cathedral

Hofburg Imperial Palace

Budweiser Town

[Austrian Parliament Building]

The Austrian Parliament Building in Vienna is the seat of the Austrian National Assembly and the Austrian Federal Parliament.

[Schonbrunn Palace]

The Schönbrunn Palace is named after a spring, which was originally an open green space. Once the Emperor Matthias had hunted for this, drinking a spring water and refreshing his heart, he called this spring a beautiful spring. In 1743, Queen Mary G. Teresia ordered the establishment of a palace here, where there were magnificent palaces and baroque gardens. It covers an area of 26,000 square meters, second only to the French Palace of Versailles, and is the second largest palace in Europe.

[Stephen's Cathedral]

Stephen's Cathedral is a symbol of the city of Vienna and one of the most famous Gothic churches in the world. Its 137-meter-tall minaret is the second tallest church spire in the world after Cologne Cathedral. The high dome, the baroque and elaborate altar, is unforgettable. Carved gorgeous marble columns. The magnificent building, with its colorful glass, makes people feel sacred. Visitors can also climb the South Tower of the Cathedral and take the elevator to see the Pomeran clock, which overlooks the city of Vienna.

[Hofburg Imperial Palace]

The Hofburg Imperial Palace is the palace of the Habsburg dynasty in Austria and is located in the heart of the capital, Vienna. From 1275 to 1913, after many reconstructions and reconstructions, it finally evolved into a maze of 18 wings, 19 courtyards and 2,500 rooms. In the six exhibition halls of the Princess Sissi Museum, there are a large number of replicas of the royal palace and some costumes, which can be used to trace the life of the Princess Sissi.

[Budweiser Town]

Bujejovice is the capital of the Czech Republic of South Bohemia, the home of Budweiser, and the old town is full of wonderful Baroque architecture. Since the 13th century, the area has been known for brewing beer. Budweiser beer originated from it, so it is also known as Budweiser town. There is a charming medieval old town with a central square in the old town, surrounded by beautiful buildings of Baroque and Renaissance style. On both sides of the street are well-preserved medieval-style buildings that vary in shape and color but are coordinated.

Prague Square

Prague Astronomical Clock

[Prague Square]

Prague is the capital of the Czech Republic and one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. Its most famous square is the Old Town Square. The center of the Old Town Square is the statue of Jan Hus. The most distinctive ancient building in the square is the self-timer. The name Prague is from German. It is called Braha, which means "threshold". The reason is that the Vltava River flows through a reef, and the water is rushing, just like crossing a threshold.

[Prague Astronomical Clock]

On the south wall of the old town hall, the astronomical clock gathers visitors from all over the world to stop and take photos to look at the clock that has been around for more than 600 years. The shape of the whole clock is very beautiful, according to the principle of the Earth Center of the year. The clock above circled around the day, the following year rounded around the week, every day at 12 noon, on the astronomical clock, the twelve beautiful Jesus disciples appeared in order from the side of the clock, six turned left, six Turn right. With a roar of the rooster, the window closes and the clock sounds.
