[Prague Square]

Prague is the capital of the Czech Republic and one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. Its most famous square is the Old Town Square. The center of the Old Town Square is the statue of Jan Hus. The most distinctive ancient building in the square is the self-timer. The name Prague is from German. It is called Braha, which means "threshold" . The reason is that the Vltava River flows through a reef, and the water is rushing, just like crossing a threshold.

[Roland Fountain]

The Roland Fountain and the square in the center of the old town of Bratislava were built around 1572 to celebrate the coronation of the Maximilian King.

[Prague Astronomical Clock]

On the south wall of the old town hall, the astronomical clock gathers visitors from all over the world to stop and take photos to look at the clock that has been around for more than 600 years. The shape of the whole clock is very beautiful, according to the principle of the Earth Center of the year. The clock above circled around the day, the following year rounded around the week, every day at 12 noon, on the astronomical clock, the twelve beautiful Jesus disciples appeared in order from the side of the clock, six turned left, six Turn right. With a roar of the rooster, the window closes and the clock sounds.
